"SHEEP AND GOATS"
AT THE RACE TRACK

By J. W. MARCHBANK

In England a leading writer on the turf calls himself "Audax" and in this country another of the craft has the pen name of "Audax Minor," probably assuming the moniker out of admiration for the commentator across the big pond. Audax Minor contributes a column to the New Yorker, which is just about the wittiest publication in the United States, and now and then drops his mantle of good-natured bantering to make a few pungent observations that are pretty serious.

For example, the New York expert can't swallow the proposition that horses owned and campaigned by people whose names are in the social register always run more consistently than those controlled by people not admitted to the functions of the social registerites. Audax Minor doesn't believe racing should be run on the honor system alone; that is, exclusively for those who happen to rank high in industry, finance and in a social way.

As to consistency on the course of runners owned by members of The Jockey Club, Audax Minor says:

"The horses from some of the establishments outside the pale—when they run in their owners' own names—maintain quite as consistent form as certain willful horses belonging to members of The Jockey Club."

In the last analysis it all comes down to the enforcement of the rules of racing by the officials; any steward who overlooks the somersaulting of a horse owned by a socialite is not fit to be in the "stand."

One good result of the commotion stirred up by a discussion as to the social standing of race horse owners may be something that should have been looked into long ago—inquiry into the real ownership of a number of horses performing on various tracks, including those at New York, where the agitation started. Secrecy in the ownership of thoroughbreds leads only to practices detrimental to the best interests of the turf.

MUST CURTAIL TO AVOID SHUT
DOWN IN WORK*Meeting Of All County
Department Heads
Called For Today

The possibility of a shut down on county governmental functions early in the spring unless drastic economy is practiced in all departments was expressed by the Board of Supervisors and Executive Walter Kellogg at their meeting in Redwood City Monday afternoon. The shortage of funds is due, they claim, to paring all departments to the bone when making up the budget in an effort to keep the tax rate down.

A special meeting of all department heads and the supervisors has been called by Kellogg for today, Friday, to discuss ways and means of averting a serious financial crisis.

As an economy move, a proposal was submitted to dispense with the services of the technical advisor of the Planning Commission, Hugh Pomeroy, nationally known planning advisor, who, it is rumored, is slated for a similar position with the federal government. At present he is serving in that capacity for five California counties.

With the new re-registration of the county's 45 to 50 thousand voters after the first of the year at a cost of approximately $10,000, and no provision made in the budget for this purpose, the unbudgeted reserve will have to be tapped, causing a serious shortage in that fund, which is maintained to take care of unforeseen emergencies.

Just where economies can be made to enable all departments to function until the end of the fiscal year, next July, is undetermined.

CONCILIATION POST APPOINTMENT FOR
JOHN J. FAHEY JR.*Young Daly City Attorney
Now Holds Important
Bankruptcy Position

John J. Fahey, Jr., young Daly City attorney, and son of Councilman John J. Fahey, was last week appointed United States Supervising Conciliation Commissioner for the Northern District of California by United States District Judges St. Sure, Louderback and Roch.

While still attending law school Mr. Fahey entered the Clerk's Office of the United States District Court in 1929 and for the ensuing six years up to the date of his new appointment was a deputy clerk of the District Court.

Mr. Fahey, 28, after graduating from the University of San Francisco Law School in 1931, opened a law office in Daly City with Daniel P. Convery, under the name Convery & Fahey.

The Northern District of California, over which Mr. Fahey will have jurisdiction, comprises the forty-one northern counties of the state. Mr. Fahey's duties will entail the supervising and counseling of the thirty odd conciliation commissioners in his district, who have heretofore been appointed pursuant to the provisions of Section 75 of the Bankruptcy Act, which act was passed by the present administration for the relief of farm debtors.

Ben S. Allen, who formerly held the post to which Mr. Fahey has been appointed, resigned last week on his return from an eastern tour of the United States in company with former President Hoover. Mr. Allen denied that the duties of publicity man for Mr. Hoover was the cause of his resignation from the position.

MOTORIST MUST LIST CHANGE IN RESIDENCE

Automobile owners who fail to notify the Department of Motor Vehicles within ten days of change in their address will be subject to arrest on a misdemeanor charge after January 1, 1936, according to a warning issued by the department recently.

California's new vehicle code requires notice of change in address whenever a person moves to a location other than shown on his application for a registration card or his certificate of ownership. Maximum sentence of six months in the county jail or a fine of $500, or both fine and imprisonment, is provided in the code for failure to obey the law.

NEWLY FORMED
SAFETY COUNCIL
TELL OF PLANS*Must Improve System
Of Traffic Law Enforcement

The Peace and Judicial Officers of San Mateo County, comprising all traffic courts and police and traffic departments in the county, held a preliminary meeting at Redwood City, Monday of this week. Through their executive committee the following statement to the public has been issued:

The growing traffic death toll is a challenge to our community. That challenge can and must be met. Under the official direction of the San Mateo County grand jury and the organized Peace and Judicial Officers of the county and with your assistance it WILL be met.

The proposed activity is not merely a "traffic drive." It will be an honest, sincere and comprehensive effort on the part of San Mateo County Officialdom to find a sensible, satisfactory and permanent solution to the problem as far as this county is concerned.

We cannot fail to readily recognize that abuses have crept into our system of traffic law enforcement. This condition is not peculiarly local to San Mateo County, but in many of its aspects is almost nationwide. It is not the fault of any individual or group, but an outgrowth rather of a progressively growing tendency to minimize the seriousness of traffic law violations and to differentiate between these and other classes of crime. This differentiation is, in our opinion, the major stimulus to increasing traffic lawlessness.

This situation can and must be corrected. For the first time in history the courts and traffic departments of the county have been officially unified by grand jury action in a comprehensive effort and plan to stamp out the intolerable and unspeakable burden of death and injury on our highways. These public officers and departments, cognizant of their responsibility to you for

ENORMOUS TREASURE
COMES OUT OF WESTBy J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

At a recent meeting in Spokane, Frank Lilly, a well known authority on mining, declared the mining empire of the Northwest is the richest mineralized area in the world. In the empire the speaker included Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, British Columbia and Alaska.

Statistics are usually pretty dry, but it might be well to mention the output of the Coeur d'Alene district is estimated at $1,300,000,000 and the production of the Butte district at $2,250,000,000.

Lilly said the mines of the region under discussion have paid a larger amount of dividends in proportion to invested capital than the mines of any other area in the world. Some of the mines have been paying dividends for a remarkably long time.

Idaho, Montana, Washington, Oregon and Alaska are at present producing more than two-fifths of the silver output of the nation; one-fifth of the gold, and nearly one-half of the zinc and one-third of the lead.

The Seward peninsula is making progress as a placer producer. Miners are making glowing reports on the work of the past season. In the Alaska Weekly we read of what is being done in the words of Fred Jones, who has been operating a dredge on Spruce Creek, about fifty miles from Nome. Jones said:

"We have no kick at all on the season we are just finishing. The dredge has been running steadily and, while we have not set the world afire, we are making some money. Spruce Creek is a tributary of Solomon River, where we are running a three-and-a-half foot bucket dredge. The pay is pretty evenly distributed through the gravel and we are looking forward to a fairly long period of time before we will have worked out our present holdings."

"You know there's a big country north of Nome, in fact all the way to Colville, that has never really been prospected, and with the airplane doing the work it is now doing in helping the prospector, it won't be long until there are no more isolated districts."

Action along similar lines to those of President Roosevelt in this country is suggested by citizens of vision for consideration of the authorities up in Canada. Following the victory of the Liberal party in the recent elections in Canada the Vancouver Sun has called upon the government to show that its liberalism is liberal in fact as well as in name.

The northern publication thinks the new government must move and move fast in making credit cheap and made plentiful for people who will use it.

Here are a few paragraphs in the Vancouver Sun that Professor Lewis Haney, an anti-Roosevelt writer, would do well to try to digest:

"The key moves today are money and technology. It is the prime business of any Liberal government to see that the surplus foods and goods produced by machines are distributed to the masses in an equitable manner."

"The benefits of technology belong not to any little group, but to all the people. And all the people must receive them."

"Just as money is no longer a fixity, but a function, so are machines no longer a capitalistic fixity, but a social function."

Professor Haney indites diatribes against the Roosevelt administration almost every night in a San Francisco paper, totally ignoring the effort of the chief executive of the nation to bring order out of chaos. The tenets of the old school of economists are no longer practical on account of technological advance and Haney does not even have a clear understanding of those tenets.

DISCUSS PLANS OF REZONING ON JUNIPERO SERRA

Plans Are Under Way For General Rezonning Of City In Future

The City Council of Daly City held its regular meeting on Monday evening of this week at the City Hall with all members present.

The Planning Commission reported having held two meetings on the proposed rezoning of the city into residential, apartment house, commercial and industrial districts.

The next meeting of the commission and the council will be held on next Monday evening, December 16, at which time an ordinance will be introduced placing the property on the corner of Eighty-ninth street and Junipero Serra boulevard in the commercial district.

A thorough study of the general zoning matter is being made and the commission expects to have a plan covering the entire city ready for adoption by the council in the near future.

Representatives of the Daly City Merchants Association and American Legion appeared and requested permission to use the Daly City Auditorium on Sunday evening, December 22, for holding a monster Christmas Tree Party for the children of Daly City. This request was granted.

The committee also asked for a donation of $50 from the council, in order to assist in defraying expenses of purchase of toys, fruit and candy to be given the children. This matter was taken under consideration for action at the adjourned meeting next Monday evening, December 16.

A letter was read from the Daly City Merchants Association, requesting the council to place on the ballot at the April city election a handbill ordinance. Granted.

In response to a letter from the Peninsula Division of the California League of Municipalities, inviting all mayors and officials of cities in the district to attend a meeting and dinner in Uncle Tom's Cabin at San Bruno, December 19, all members of the council and also Chief of Police Doyle, Superintendent Bodien, City Clerk Ross and Assistant Engineer Klassen signified their intention to attend.

A communication from the Colma Chamber of Commerce asked the council to assist residents in obtaining mail delivery on Lower Mission street. The clerk was instructed to communicate with the postmaster at San Francisco in an effort to have mail so delivered.

The council adjourned to meet next Monday evening, December 16.

Ribbons tied to the gifts extended to each place and on pulling the ribbons and opening the packages the girls found a little doll and the boys an automobile. Red and green crepe paper completed the decorations.

Dorothy received many lovely gifts.

A reception will be given in honor of the bride and groom at 7 p. m., in Eagles Hall on Mission street in Daly City.

REMINISCENCES OF BYGONE DAYS BY AN OLDTIMER

Says Old Gum Boot Boys Left Little Gold For Later Miners To Take Out

That versatile writer on mining topics, Sidney Norman, contributes the following comprehensive article in the Vancouver Sun, of which he is the mining editor:

British Columbia has dug a good many things from Mother Earth since Captain Vancouver cast an optic upon its shores, but, varied as underground resources have since been proved, it is doubtful, if there have been many instances of the experience recently bumped into by an Interior placer mining company.

Since the latter believed it was operating virgin ground, and so advertised to the world it might not be ethical to mention names, but it will do no harm to say that the operation is in the Greenwood district and that considerable money has been spent in providing a good head of water for the monitors.

Anyway, some time ago the giants exposed suspicious-looking timbers, indicating that someone had been on the premises and even underground before the present onslaught was made and, a little further into the bank, the skeleton of a Chinaman was found, naturally somewhat the worse for wear.

The question now arises as to the time the lone miner met disaster in the "run" that evidently demolished his primitive protection and cut him off from many possibility of rescue.

It is known that the area was combed for pay colors as far back as the 60's by the overflow from California and Montana and it is quite probable the remains just found are those of one of the Chinese camp followers who tracked the pioneers like bloodhounds and made profit where the white man failed, often working all alone. Anyway, one Chinaman, more or less, didn't seem to matter much in those days.

Pioneers Mined Clean

Many such experiences have marked latter-day promotions in California and the minewise fraternity has come to the conclusion that the old-timers, in spite of primitive tools, short supplies and long distances were not such slouches at the clean-up game as many tenderfeet surmised.

Three years ago I was in Sierra county, high up on the mountain south of quaint old Downieville, one of the real centers of the placer game in early days, and there had visual evidence of the competency of these old gum-boot boys.

A San Francisco company, name deleted, had visions of fortune in supposed continuation of the great channel originally worked by the City of Six partnership nearly sixty years ago, and had jollied itself into the belief that part of the channel on the old Gum Boot placer group had been missed.

What, No Gold?

Modern equipment had been set up on surface and a new shaft sunk to a depth of 300 feet. The day I arrived the old channel had been reached and I was invited to descend.

The workings were there all right, but evidence of anything having been missed was certainly and most distinctly not there.

Marks of the old pick strokes were still plainly marked on the walls of the narrow, stoop-over drifts, the larger rocks were still neatly piled in the by-passes or crosscuts, and lying around in the slum were primitive mining weapons used in those good old days.

Much to the regret and financial disappointment of the backers of the company there was no utilitarian necessity for the elaborate washing plant already constructed on surface.

What happened later, I do not know, but it may be taken for granted that since that time I have entertained an enormous amount of respect for the be-whiskered old miner of the 60's.

I expect, if the truth were known, much the same sort of thing has happened in this province and it might therefore be well for intending promoters and investors to look well for Chinamen before they leap.

Has B. C. Any Tin?

Some weeks ago this department published a story, for what it was worth, regarding a rumor that important deposits of cassiterite, the ore of tin, had been discovered in the northern part of the province, about 35 miles from transportation, and that an English company had already examined it and made a tentative offer of some magnitude for the property.

Since then our informant has organized a small syndicate and, armed with a bundle of miners' certificates, has departed for the scene to locate around the main discovery and get in on the good thing that he seems confident will be disclosed early next month.

Few items appearing in these columns have excited more interest, and our correspondence has been largely increased trying to answer queries.

Let us say, here and now, that we then published all we know about the rumor. Time alone will prove

DEDICATION OF CROCKER SCHOOL PROGRAM PLAN

Crocker P. T. A. held an interesting meeting on Tuesday of this week, in the General Pershing School. Mrs. Bernadine Lewis, president, presided. Plans were discussed for the next meeting, which will be in the new Crocker School building. The officers are planning to hold open house for the members and the mothers of children attending Crocker School. Refreshments will be served and everyone interested in visiting our beautiful new school is invited to attend the next regular meeting on January 14.

The bazaar, for which the members have been busily sewing the last few months, was held on Friday last. It was a great success financially and the proceeds will help defray expense of the Christmas program and graduates party, which will be held December 20, at the home of Mrs. Lewis, 199 Acton street, at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Orville Pauw gave an interesting report on the high lights of the last meeting of the Seventeenth District, held in Burlingame High School, Mrs. Pauw also sang several Christmas selections.

The dedication of Crocker School will take place on Sunday afternoon, December 22, at 2 o'clock. All past presidents are asked to be present.

Crocker P. T. A. wish at this time to thank those who so generously helped make their bazaar and food sale a success, the Daly City Record for the publicity given us over a period of several months, the board of the Clinic and Daly City Welfare, for the use of their room in the Daly City Theater building; the stores which so kindly displayed the posters and the members and friends who donated so generously of their time and material. We feel that the success of this project is due in a great measure to their generosity.

The next meeting of Seventeenth District will be held in Burlingame High School, on the second Friday of December, and, it being so close to the Christmas holidays, only a half day session will be held.

whether or not the item was based on fact.

Granby Responsible

Among the letters received was one from Ernest H. Vaughan, assayer and chemist for Grandoro Mines, Osoyoos district, who has had wide experience in tin assaying and who was interested in our description of efforts made at Temescal, California, and Moran prairie, Spokane, to develop commercial supplies.

He tells us he well remembers the Spokane excitement and adds that samples were sent to all smelters in Canada and U. S. A. for analysis. He was then assistant assayer and chemist for Granby at Grand Forks and handled the Spokane samples, which were sent for determination as to copper content, but returned negative results.

W. B. Bishop, chief assayer and chemist at the time, now demonstrator of fire assaying at University of British Columbia, was first to suspect the presence of tin values and it is Mr. Vaughan's recollection that the first assays gave results up to 16 per cent tungstic acid.

The old Cornish method of concentration and subsequent fusion with potassium cyanide for tin determination, and the equally old method of prolonged digestion in aqua regia for tungstic acid, were followed.

The new method, which Mr. Vaughan explains with a lot of hieroglyphics that we fail to understand, was not then discovered. Anyway, it is interesting to know that Granby really started the excitement out on Moran prairie back in 1918.

At that time, Jay P. Graves was the head of the Granby company, basking in the sunlight of fame and financial freedom, the just due of a miracle promoter who had successfully elevated copper ore carrying less than two per cent to profit, in face of the pitying derision of the engineering and metallurgical wise guys.

"By What He Gave"

Glancing over the columns of the Los Angeles Times last week, I came across the well-remembered face of Col. Seeley W. Mudd, one of the finest, cleanest, most efficient, best-equipped and best-regarded mining engineers ever identified with the industry in the United States.

He passed on at the height of his mental powers on May 26, 1926, and the remembrance evidently found place in the Times through the love of his widow and two sons, Dr. Seeley Mudd and Harvey S. Mudd, the latter also one of the outstanding engineers of the West, head of a powerful operating company founded in his father's experience and wealth. The remembrance came upon the anniversary of Col. Mudd's birth on August 16, 1861.

To enumerate the responsible positions he occupied during a busy life would be impossible here but they included St. Louis Smelting & Refining Company, for which he was superintendent of the copper department; general manager Small Hopes and Borel mining companies, Leadville, Colorado; later Ibez and Little Johnnie mines in the same state; consulting engineer for New Jersey Zinc Company in the West and in the same capacity later for the Guggenheim interests.

Many Great Projects

After he moved to Los Angeles in 1904 he was president and general manager of Queen Esther Mining & Milling Company, at Mojave, a regular dividend-payer for many years and adjoining the sensational strike recently made in that desert district, 100 miles from Los Angeles.

Later, he was one of the organizers of Ray Consolidated Copper Company and, so great was the confidence reposed in his judgment by the Guggenheim interests, he was called upon to render final judgment upon the properties of Utah Copper Company, before they were taken over.

In 1913 he acquired control of United Eastern mine, Oatman, Arizona and subsequently distributed $6,000,000 in dividends from that source.

His greatest mining achievement however, was successful development of the great sulphur deposits of Matagorda county, Texas, through Texas Gulf Sulphur Company, which became the greatest producer in the world.

During the World War he was a dollar-a-year man as assistant director of explosive plants and in more recent years became interested in mines on the Island of Cyprus, in the Coeur d'Alene district, Idaho, and elsewhere.

Generous Bequests

By his will he gave $1,000,000 to Claremont colleges; $100,000 to Pomona College; $100,000 to Good Samaritan Hospital; $25,000 to the Los Angeles Y. M. C. A.; $25,000 to the Southwest Museum; $25,000 to the United Engineering Society; and a long list of smaller bequests to institutions and old friends.

Great as his material benefactions were, however, it was in other directions he won the great respect and love of his fellows. Success bred not the slightest suspicion of arrogance or assumed superiority.

Bringing to bear upon every phase of life the highest ideals, he was the personification of courtesy, kindness and consideration. He was never too busy or too preoccupied to listen to the troubles of others and extend a helping hand. Hundreds of men less fortunate can testify to his generosity and sympathetic, reassuring encouragement.

Back in 1909 I organized the Sierra Madre Club of Los Angeles, then the only social club of mining and oil men in the United States. Col. Mudd was the first president of that organization of 1800 fine men and I grew to know him well and appreciate him to the full.

Over nine years have passed since the last call came. He has not been forgotten by those privileged to know him and will not be while they live. He honored his profession and exemplified the highest ideals of the mining industry.

He also proved once more that there are no more charitable men on earth than those connected with the one industry that robs none and benefits all.

CAUGHT IN THE WILD

By ROBERT AMES BENNET

"Bon voyage!" said Garth. "You may reach the top of the glacier with the soles still on your golf-course boots. Your father, I fancy, will prefer to wait here a while. For one thing, he knows that in his present condition, he never could climb the pass. In the second place, he has no desire to go down the other side on his uppers."

Huxby looked from Mr. Ramill's flimsy oxfords to the girl's fashionable sport boots, and then at Garth's worn moccasins.

"Well, Jack, what's the answer?" "That it's not well," Garth replied. "In the first place, you'll drop that name and tone in speaking to me. Am I understood?"

Huxby stood silent, his eyes cold and lips tight drawn. But Mr. Ramill spoke for him, with decisiveness: "That is understood, Garth. We are all now in the same boat, and you are skipper. How about the shoe problem?"

"Moosehide. We'll first shift along-shore to the mouth of the glacier till it's the best place to camp. I'll then go on around to the muskies and collect some hides."

"Don't be too sure of that," Huxby differed. "Keep hold of the rifle, chief. He'd streak out and leave us to hold the sack."

"Haven't you realized yet that the joke is on you?" Garth inquired. "It's a question of trusting me absolutely, or not at all. Take your choice."

Mr. Ramill handed over the rifle. Huxby's hand tightened on the butt of his lowered pistol. Garth gazed past him down the lake.

"The plane seems to be edging over towards the east shore. There's a ford up here, Huxby. You're welcome to try for the plane. If you save her, I'll call it a break of the game in your favor, and we'll all ride out on the air."

"Lay off, Vivian," Mr. Ramill interposed. "The plane has veered out again. He has us nipped fast."

Without any reply, Huxby thrust his pistol inside his leather jacket and started up the stream bank. Garth came aslant to his pack. He slung it on his back.

"Come on. Let's head for camp." "Why not follow Vivian?" Mr. Ramill inquired. "It is still possible the plane may drift ashore."

"A hundred to one chance it will not, sir. We'll go out on moosehide, if at all. I've decided not to make it alone. A trip through the muskies may lead you to realize that even lone woody prospectors should be entitled to the fruits of their discoveries."

The girl's smoldering rage flared out at him: "You scoundrel! Decoy us into this beastly hole, and then turn our plane adrift. You cowardly sneak! Everything drifting away in it—and all the food and wine. Oh, d—n! What am I going to do? I'll starve!"

Her father looked at Garth with the first sign of concern that he had shown. "Yes, that's it. You might have thought of her. A girl so delicately reared! I say nothing as to myself; it's all in the game. But a lady—to drag her down into the raw like this! Marooning her to starve in the bog!"

Garth looked from father to daughter. "A lady, did you say? Oh, yes, to be sure—a dainty, refined lady, who curses and drinks and jolts in schemes to bilk a supposedly simple bush vagabond out of his fortune."

"Fah!" she scoffed. "Whining because we would not let you foist yourself on us as a gentleman. As for your twaddle about that claim, mine

No question as to the girl and Huxby, if they obeyed orders. They could make it. A crash in the alders broke in upon Garth's thoughts. The splash that followed told him a moose had caught his scent and taken to the lake. To have run to the bank and shot the swimming beast would have been easy. Only, he had no canoe or raft, and the water here was rather deep offshore.

He stalked down through the timber. For the first hundred feet or so out from the shore thickets, willows grew along both sides of the low ledge. A peer through the foliage showed the immense palmate antlers of an old bull moose.

Garth flattened down on the moss-covered dyke and crawled away from the bank. Shoreward, on the other side, he caught sight of a slight movement among the willows. He rose on his knees and swung up his rifle. Though he was still screened by the brush alongside the ledge, his quick movements sent a strong whiff of man-scent downwind.

With loud snorts of alarm, two cow moose, a calf, and a young bull heaved up among the willows less than a dozen yards apart. They started to plunge forward out of the thicket. Garth's first shot dropped the calfless cow with a bullet through the head. His second bullet glanced off the base of the bull's left antler. Partly stunned by the shock, the bull swerved sideways, only to drop in his tracks, shot through the heart.

Silently as he had stalked out the ledge, Garth returned to solid ground. He knew that the snorting, bawling moose in the pools would soon quiet down and return to their lily-pond feeding. The only requirement was for him to keep out of sight and either across or down wind from the stupid beasts. They had not learned to fear human hunters.

A few steps along the bank brought him to a game trail through the thickets. He laid down his rifle and waded out to the dead bull. The body lay on a down-beaten mat of willow stems. Garth at once set to work with his knife.

To dress out a thousand-pound animal is no light task, even under the best of conditions. Garth thought nothing of it. All the hide within reach slid free to the quick draw of his curved knife blade. With belt-ax and knife he cut off the antlered head, then the upper foreleg and hindquarter. After that he was able to heave the carcass over by the leverage of the other legs.

When he had finished with the bull, he went to the cow. She weighed perhaps 200 pounds less, and was therefore easier to dress out.

With the two skins and all the meat ashore, he took a dip in a clear pool and washed his buckskins. As he sloshed out of the willows in the wet garments, he saw Miss Ramill staring through her headnet at the eight big legs. He had hooked them on the stubs of spruce limbs. Her gaze lowered from the other raw moose products that were piled on one of the hides. She turned from them loathingly.

"Faugh! What a sickening mess! Have you started a packing plant?"

"The packing is just about to start," he replied. "Are you too feeble to carry this rolled skin? It's the lighter one."

"That filthy thing? You may be sure I'm not so feeble-minded as to touch any of your butcher mess."

"Very well. Only remember, it's your own choice, sister."

He bagged the contents of the bull hide, slung it on his back, picked up his rifle, and headed for camp. The girl looked from him to the folded moose cow skin, hesitated, flushed angrily, and followed, empty-handed.

While still some distance from the rill, he whiffed a tang of wood smoke. He quickened his step. It gave him a pleasant surprise. After all, the girl seemed to have given in, at least partly. He turned to her with a friendly look. She met it with a scornful smile.

Garth met the disdainful gaze of the girl with a smile. "So your father turns you over to me, my lady. Let me hasten to assure you, I beg to decline the honor."

"Ah, indeed?" "Yes, indeed!" "Yes, I'll let old Mother Nature spank you till you come to your senses."

Her blue eyes flared with scorn. "Oh, you—you! D—n!"

"Better save your energy," he advised. "You'll need it all, unless your pride stoops to the squaw work of camp-fire tending. Smoke drives off insects. For another thing, no wolf, wolverine or lynx, or even a grizzly, will venture close to a fire. Think that over, Mr. Ramill, you have your patent lighter."

He swung away between the spruces without waiting for any reply. Left alone with her exhausted father, the girl might come to realize how utterly she had crashed out of her soft and luxurious civilized environment.

A girl whom even her father had been unable to control! That had been evident from the first. She was a badly spoiled product of the jazz-age—willful, arrogant, utterly selfish. Fortunately she had shown herself no less hard physically than mentally. Otherwise he would have played the game in a different way. No weak-muscled woman could make that travails to the Mackenzie.

As for her father, he had only himself to thank. A pirate should expect to take his chances. He might be gotten out to the river, and he might not. That depended upon his heart. Soft muscles could be hardened. Not so a weak heart.

girl's nose went up for an involuntary sniff. Garth met the intent look of her father, and allowed his left eyelid to flutter slightly. Another turn of the spits completed the broiling. He handed one of them to Mr. Ramill.

The millionaire lifted his headnet to take a gingerly nibble at his hot meat. His heavy face brightened with a surprised smile. He smacked his lips and bit off a large mouthful. At the sound, his daughter jerked around. Garth was biting into the other piece of liver.

The girl cried out her indignation: "You greedy pigs! Where's my piece?" Garth pointed to the moosehide. "Help yourself."

He met her furious look with cool indifference, and went on eating. Unable to blast him, she turned to her father.

"I'll take yours, Dad. You've had two bites. It will not take you long to cook another piece. Make it three." At that, Garth swung around between father and daughter.

"Mr. Ramill, we'll settle this right now. You said you'd leave her to me. I cooked that meat for you. She will cook her own meat, or go without." The older man sat for several moments considering the matter. He then raised his piece of meat and resumed his meal. Lillith Ramill stared at him, her eyes wide.

"My own father! But wait till Vivian comes back!" He winced, Garth ignored her. "Better lie down and rest, sir. You've done enough for a while. I'm going to get you into hard training as soon as possible. But we must not overdo it at the start. Might mean a breakdown."

"I am tired, boy—and hungry as a shark. Could eat all the rest of that liver."

"Not now. You'll rest, do some work, and then get another slice. Call this valley one of those physical culture sanitariums where the tired business man is worked and dieted back into fit condition."

"I have yet to agree to such training, Garth." "Take your choice. If you refuse, I give you my word you'll never reach the Mackenzie. I might back-pack you in some places; you don't weigh much over two hundred. Happens, though, I'm not a donkey. You'll go on your own feet."

"Very well. Put me on them." Obdient to directions, the big man stretched out flat upon the sunwarmed rock. Garth turned about to pull the moosehide and what was upon it into the shade of a birch.

Miss Ramill thrust in front of him and seized his knife. She slashed at the liver. The blade was razor-sharp. Her angry stroke not only cut through the liver, it slit the moosehide as well. Garth said nothing. Enough for him that hunger had humbled the girl's pride. She had learned her first lesson. Long hours had passed since her flimsy breakfasting on wine and delicatessen in the cable of the monoplane, far over on the Mackenzie. She was fairly ravenous.

Her rouged lips twitched with anticipation as she held the split liver of low-burnt fire. Well satisfied, Garth hung the remaining liver, the tongues and mufles under the cache platform. A smudge-fire on the ground below the meat drove off the flies.

Miss Ramill's only thought had been for her food. She did not think to put fresh fuel on the cook-fire. When it died down to embers, she jerked the partly burnt, inwardly rare slice of liver from the charred willow spit. There was now no flimsy fastidiousness about her eating. She thrust off her headnet and sank her teeth into the piece of liver with the gusto of a hungry boy. Bite followed bite in rapid succession.

CHRISTMAS STORY CONTEST WINNERS

Following are the three articles written by students of the Crocker School which were adjudged the best in the order of their appearance.

A Christmas Surprise

It was Christmas morning, the snow was falling on the ground and in the distance one could hear sleigh bells ringing.

There was only one little house that could be seen. In this house an old woman was sitting in a cozy room by a warm fire looking out the window. There was joy and happiness in her heart.

She listened and heard that the sleigh bells were coming nearer and nearer. She watched and saw that the sleigh stopped in front of her home, but did not recognize the people and children that got out of the sleigh, and she wondered why they stopped at her home.

The people knocked at her door and having opened it was surprised to find her children whom she had not seen for many years. They all brought her many gifts, and came to spend the Christmas with her. After greeting them, she prepared dinner for her children, then they sat by the fire and talked back memories of days gone by.

They stayed with their happy mother till after New Years and had a very lovely family reunion.

LORRAINE BARAZOTA.

Christmas Time

Christmas time should be a time of glad and happy cheer for everyone. Many people who are poor can have a happy time even though they don't get many gifts. It is not gifts but the Spirit of Christmas which makes Christmas a happy time. Christmas always seems to gladden the hearts of good people. The few weeks before Christmas should be used with thoughtfulness and kindness. I do not believe that all people know why they hang candles in their windows but this is the reason: Hanging a candle in a window comes from an old legend which says the candles help the traveler on his way. The important thing to remember is that we should not give gifts because it is our duty but because we like to give them.

Jeanne's Christmas

It was a very cold and snowy night. Everybody was very happy because it was Christmas Eve. There was one little girl named Jeanne however, who was not very happy. Her poor and ragged little form, nobody had noticed. Jeanne was very cold and hungry. Her parents were dead and she was all by herself.

It was growing very dark and as Jeanne passed a house she would look into the window where she would see happy children gathered around a Christmas tree. Her poor little heart would almost break, when she thought of the good times she used to have when her mother was living, even if they used to be poor.

As Jeanne put her cold cheeks and little pug nose against the window panes, she would see many different sights, but they were all happy sights. In some houses Jeanne would see happy people sitting at a table which was full of good things to eat. How she would have liked to eat even the crumbs that the people left.

Finally, Jeanne felt so tired and weak that she sat down and went to sleep on a doorstep. She awoke three hours later and she felt very warm. What was her surprise to find herself in a bed in a beautiful room, with kind and eager faces looking at her. She was so startled that she couldn't speak. These kind people had brought her in and had put her to bed. They gave Jeanne warm things to eat and as she ate she told them her sad story.

It was a different little girl with a happy heart that awoke on Christmas morning to wish her kind guardians a "Happy Christmas".

DRAINING WATER

It is a good plan to allow the engine to run slowly while draining and refilling the car's cooling system.

With the motor running, any obstruction due to clogged hose, thermostat, and the like may be immediately detected.

WHEN VALVES STICK

If an intake valve is sticking the trouble will manifest itself through a tendency of the cylinder to backfire. A sticking exhaust valve works with an almost reverse effect in that it causes the engine to miss altogether.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

In all Christian Science Churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, December 15, on the subject "God the Preserver of Man."

The Golden Text will be: "The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore" (Ps. 121:8). Bible selections will include the following passage from I Peter 3: 10, 12-13: "For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile. . . . For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?"

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "To hold yourself superior to sin, because God made you superior to it and governs man, is true wisdom. To fear sin is to misunderstand the power of Love and the divine Science of being in man's relation to God,—to doubt His government and distrust His omnipotent care" (p. 231).

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: How was the last skyscraper felled at the Chicago Fair grounds?

Answer: The crash of "Andy" came the last day of August, 1935. With scientific precision the 628 foot steel structure, weighing 500 tons, was felled on the fairgrounds northerly isle without any of the incidental damage which marked the tumbling of its mate, "Amos," some months ago.

There was a vivid yellow flare as Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Century of Progress Exposition, threw an electric switch on a platform on the mainland which ignited a chemical compound, generating an intense heat, at the north legs of the monster. The heat quickly melted its pins to send the tower toppling slowly in a cloud of thick gray smoke. As many as 100,000 spectators witnessed the last spectacle of the 1933-34 World Fair.

Question: What did President Wilson say regarding lynch lawlessness?

Answer: "I say plainly that every American who takes part in the action of a mob or give it any sort of countenance is no true son of this great democracy, but its betrayer."

Question: How many acres of ground would be required to feed one person for a year?

Answer: Seven acres.

Question: What causes a mineral spring?

Answer: Water, in filtering through the ground, dissolves carbonate of lime and various other minerals. Springs whose waters contain these substances in solution are known as mineral springs. Various gases, such as carbon dioxide, sulphurated hydrogen and nitrogen, are also found in the water of these springs. Some mineral springs have become noted health resorts, because of the curative properties of their waters. Saratoga Springs and Sharon Springs, New York; Mount Clemens, Michigan; the springs at Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia; hot springs at Hot Springs, National Park, Arizona, and at Thermopolis, Wyoming, are good examples of such springs.

Question: What state, which was one of the original thirteen, is called the Palmetto State and has for its flower, the yellow jasmine.

Answer: South Carolina.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney
We read in history that the wife of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the poet, was burned to death because she carelessly threw a lighted match on the floor, and similar fatalities have been numerous.

Every day children are losing their lives while playing with matches and you will find references to such regrettable occurrences in every fire department report.

Matches should be kept in metal or earthenware containers, well out of the reach of children. They should never be allowed to amuse themselves with these small but dangerous fire makers, and if you find your small sister playing with one take it away and impress on her the fact that she is endangering herself, her home and everything in it.

The same corrective measures should be employed with boys; but, owing to the nature of their clothing, girls are in greater danger of being burned. Babies and small children seem to have a special curiosity in regard to eating matches, which is another good reason to keep them out of their hands.

There wouldn't be so many divorces on flimsy grounds if so many marriages were not entered into on flimsy grounds.

FOR HUMMING GEARS

A humming noise in the gears of the transmission, or in the differential, should be given immediate attention.

It is a symptom of what may prove a costly trouble. At its first manifestation, the hum probably is the product of nothing more serious than late predecessors as well, is a much "fine" mechanism than old cars were.

As a consequence, a slight misadjustment of various units, such as the ignition timing, will make a greater difference in respect to performance efficiency.

Slave to a Gosh-dinged heating plant... NOT ME!

THOUSANDS of users of gas heating who have "tried them all" voice but one regret—they didn't begin to enjoy the utterly carefree comfort of gas heating soon enough. Why? Because gas heating so completely and thoroughly lives up in performance to all its fine points.

I'll Tell the World... Gas Heat Can't Be Beat!

Gas heating's fine points are these: You save money on the equipment you buy because the first cost is less. Automatic thermostat equipment is lowest in cost. And each piece of gas heating equipment is complete in itself. The gas fuel is delivered in a pipe, you order it as you use it and pay for it after you use it. Gas fuel, too, ignites instantly—without the bother of matches or tapers.

It's Plenty Reasonable, Too!

Over 200,000 Northern California families using gas heat know its reasonable cost. Month after month throughout the year when all the costs of house heating are figured in—gas heating is too inexpensive to do without.

GAS CIRCULATING HEATER

Have you seen the beautiful new models of these compact and complete heating units? Extremely reasonable to operate.

GAS FLOOR FURNACE

An ideal solution for furnace heat for home without a basement. Healthful, quick-acting with low operating cost.

GAS STEAM RADIATOR

Here the luxury of steam heat for modest home with modest income. Takes up but little space by a wall. Low in first cost and operating cost.

NEWLY FORMED SAFETY COUNCIL TELL OF PLANS

Must Improve System Of Traffic Law Enforcement

your safety on the public streets and highways, propose now by united action to introduce such reforms as will insure, within the bounds of justice, a sure, swift, rigid and uniform enforcement of traffic laws and punishment of traffic violations to the end that human life will become more sacred in San Mateo County.

In these reforms you will necessarily have a part. We solicit your forbearance and cooperation, particularly in the matter of observing traffic laws and regulations. The "fixing" of tags, suspended sentences and importuning of traffic and judicial officers must inevitably disappear, if we are to have, as you intend we should have, traffic safety. Particularly during the imminent holiday season do we solicit your care for safety and regard for traffic law. We pledge ourselves again to our responsibility, the public safety. We shall do our part; may we not count on you?

Hammick, Johanna Headval, Lucy Nelson, Grace Coolish, Lillie Brisoless, Josephine Kelley, Marie Thompson, Leah Cole, Cora Ray, Lillie White, Doris Burdick, Emily Twisten, Lillian Marshall, Mildred Sanders, A. ONE TRICK OF GREASE

Grease on the brake linings produces some odd effects. One of the oddest is that when the brakes are cold, it will create improved stopping ability. After the first two or three stops, however, depending upon how closely spaced they are, the efficiency of the brakes diminishes to the vanishing point.

Take no chances with grease on the linings, but have it removed at once or have the linings replaced.

Braking Efficiency

Braking efficiency can be promoted by occasionally cleaning the surface of the brake drum that contacts the brake lining.

Particles of gravel and other foreign substances accumulate in the drums and if not removed they become imbedded in the lining and cause the surface of the drums to become scored or scratched.

Mrs. M. Woodside, president of the General Pershing P. T. A., and Mrs. Marie Parodi of Evergreen avenue attended the Seventeenth District P. T. A. meeting, Friday of this week.
